The Psychophysiology of Self-Regulation:
Skills for Therapists to Stabilize Trauma and Emotional Overwhelm
In Our Clients and Ourselves

A Full Day with Sarah Schlote, MA, CCC, SEP
The Albert on Bay Hotel – Ottawa, Ontario
November 18, 2013 • 8:30am – 4pm • $190 + HST

Back by popular demand!

Grounded in the principles of somatic psychotherapy, neurobiology and mindfulness, the workshop will provide theoretical and practical knowledge about physical and emotional regulation to support yourself and the people you work with in a gentle, non-pathologizing way.

You will leave with a greater understanding of:

- Why animals in the wild rarely experience trauma
- The impact of stress and trauma on the nervous system, brain and attachment
- How to view mental health, addictions and trauma through a somatic lens
- The importance of working safely with the body within a window of tolerance
- Why solution-focused, cognitive-behavioural approaches, as well as venting and catharsis, can sometimes be ineffective or harmful
- Why meditation and yoga can be triggering without the proper skills in place

Geared specifically for therapists who support clients who have experienced trauma or struggle with emotional overwhelm, this workshop will provide opportunity to:

- Learn about the principles of trauma-informed practice
- Discover the importance of orienting to sensory information
- Explore tracking in relation to self-regulation and attunement
- Discover the difference between "why" and "how" questions
- Learn about titration and containment as therapeutic skills
- Discuss your questions and case examples from a somatic lens

Hello!

We invite you to join us as CAST Canada partners up with Sarah Schlote. We first met Sarah when she delivered a workshop at our Grounding Trauma 2012 conference where she was extremely well received. We have since worked hard to develop a full day of relevant, productive material, holding pilots and getting feedback from working professionals like yourself.

We look forward to seeing you there.
